

Final Meeting and Conference.

The Erasmus+ funded project DigiComPass comes to an end. On November 26, 2024 the last meeting of the project partners was held, where the progress of the planned and envisaged activities was evaluated and the follow-up steps were discussed.

The e-skills learning platform, based on the Flipped Learnign methodology, is ready to be implemented for the various target groups. The implementation manuals for trainers have been drafted and translated, and the consortium is heading to broadcast the results of the project through social channels and institutional communication.

The newly founded DigiComPass association launches its member recruitment campaign, available on the official project website.

Through the dedicated form, it will be possible to join and benefit from the research material and scientific papers produced during the two-year project. There is no registration fee for new members.

Final TPM in Nicosia Cyprus – Nov. 2024 Partners discussion, final project closure measures.

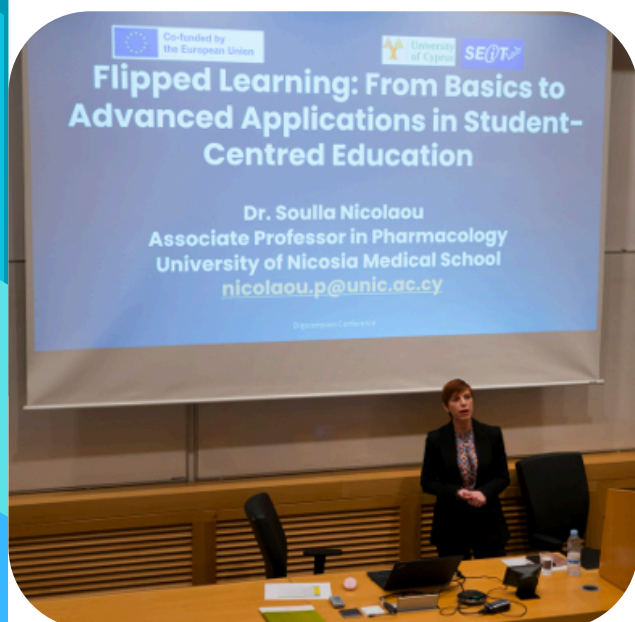

The final Conference

The final conference of the project was held from 27 to 29 November 2024 in the premises made available by the University of Cyprus, a three-day event dedicated to various times of technical-pedagogical-scientific interest where various speakers presented to the audience innovative approaches and case studies related to the implementation of flipped learning, and new and interactive learning methodologies with special reference to the adult target group in a lifelong learning perspective.

Final Conference, Cyprus 2024 – The Keynote Peter Mazohl on Flipped Learning Approach.

Final Conference, Cyprus 2024
Prof. Soulla Nicolau

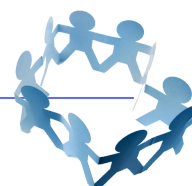

The event featured a number of high-level speakers, including Peter Mazohl, keynote speaker with a view on the power of Flipped Learning 3.0 – the Associated Prof. Soulla Nicolau (University Of Nicosia Medical School) with a remarkable talk on Flipped Learning: From Basics to Advanced Applications in Student-Centred Education and more, Michail Filioglu & Nikolaos Tzimopoulos with Implementation of the training course on remote places, Nina Christine Peters from the August Wilhelm Scheer Institute, Germany and her talk on the assessment of digital competences.

During the conference, some of the members of the DigiComPass consortium held interactive workshops using interactive multimedia tools that engaged the audience and made participation in the event active.

The conference was closed by Dr. Alexandros Yeratziotis (SEIT Lab, University of Cyprus), coordinator of the DigiComPass project, who presented the results obtained and concluded the two-year project activity.

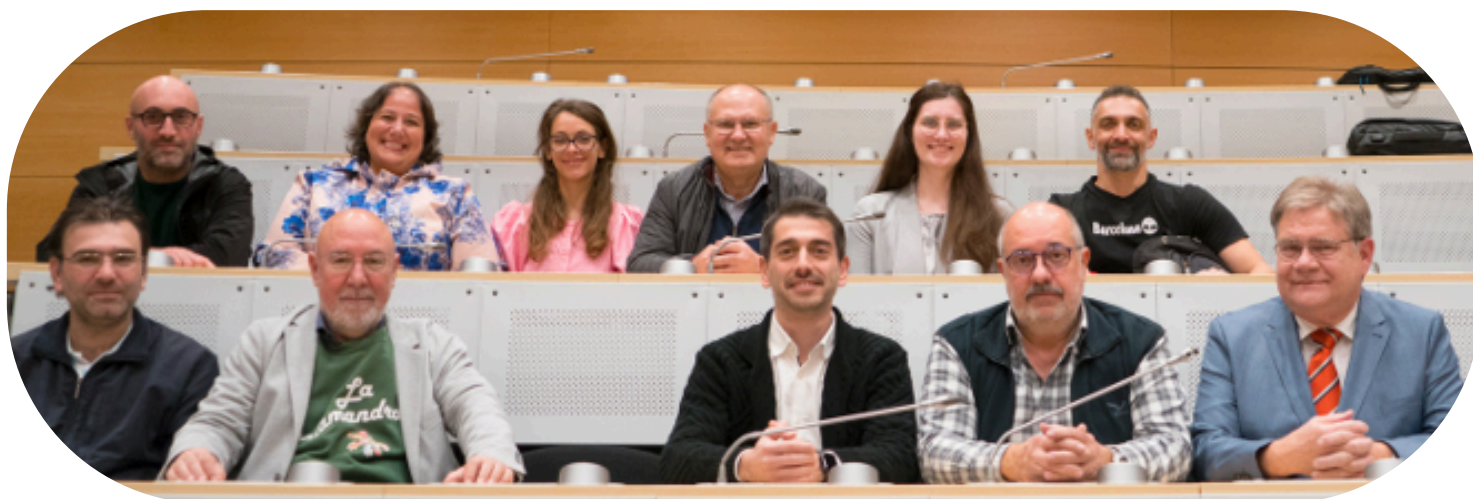

Co-funded by
the European Union

The Last Chapter

In two years, partners from Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, Greece, Spain and Italy created a consortium that worked meticulously to develop an innovative platform for learning and assessment of digital competences on the basis of a new approach that makes the learning phase engaging and stimulating, the implementation of Flipped Learning 3.0 is a challenge to which the consortium was called to respond through phases of research and material production: methodology implementation manuals, transferability manuals, and a series of research documents translated into all the languages of the consortium countries were produced, all the work carried out is available on the website free of charge and available to stakeholders.

Final Conference, Cyprus 2024 - DigiComPass Team

Another very important aspect is the bond of friendship that has been created between countries, peoples and people: the DigiComPass has worked harmoniously to develop the work packages, strong human relationships and mutual respect have been created, from colleagues we have become friends.

'In an increasingly connected world, it is crucial to preserve the authenticity of human ties. Friendship between the peoples of Europe is our greatest asset and the key to a peaceful and prosperous future.'

Thank you all for these wonderful two years together.

Co-funded by
the European Union